HOWEVER LONG YOU STAY
THE TIME WILL PASS
ALL TOO QUICKLY

THE ARTISTIC heritage of the pre-Columbian era is of inexhaustible wealth and the museums are filled with unimaginable treasures. You will be awed by the architectural beauties of the churches of Taxco, Puebla and San Miguel Allende and amazed by the panorama of Mexico City spread around you as you stand at the top of the Latin American Tower. There are villages situated on the edges of lakes or perched in the mountains in a setting of trees and flowers. The coastline is bathed by the limpid sea and is a paradise for lovers of aquatic sports. Throughout Mexico, comfortable hotels extend a welcome to the tourist offering relaxation and joie de vivre. A holiday in Mexico will leave you with lasting memories and you will have only one desire—to return to this land of enchantment. There are daily flights from Europe to Mexico and New York is only 4½ hours from Mexico City. Do not wait for the 1968 Olympic Games! Come to Mexico now!

COLIBRI<sup>NESS</sup>

Give Colibri and they'll know you really care

Actions mean more than words, and the Colibri has the smoothest action in the world. No controls to fuss with, a perfect flame every time (automatically controlled by a tiny thermostat). The five lighters illustrated represent five complete ranges covering dozens of delightfully different designs. Whichever you choose, you'll be very popular this Christmas.

See the new SX23—a truly outstanding lighter. The same smooth Colibri action, of course, but so much more! We took the streamlined elegance of the S23 (that's the one on the far left), jewellery finished it all over—even the base. We made the screws invisible. Then heavily gold plated it and... eureka! The SX23—the most sophisticated lighter in the world.

1. One of twenty delightful miniGAS designs, all with the famous Colibri action, from as little as 58/6d. to 60 guineas.
2. The smart, efficient monoGAS, in more than 30 designs from 58/6d. to 250 guineas. Plus the new CITIZEN at only 49/11d.
3. The S23, in smooth black leather with gold-plated mechanism 85/-d. A host of other designs to choose from.
4. The Regent Table Lighter in Fine Patterned Crystal, a superb gift at 88/6d. More than 50 Table Models available—all with 3-year gas capacity—in Onyx, Silver, Silver Plate, China, Stainless Steel, Wood, etc.
5. The new SX23. Jewellery engine turned all over in heavy gold plate. Not a screw in sight! From 10 guineas.

An extra for him! The revolutionary new, self-cleaning Colibri Coolway pipe. A truly scientifically designed pipe with a host of up-to-the-minute features. Available in a choice of finishes in two qualities of briar, from 27/6d.

Marvellous!

'CRIMPLENE'—WORLD'S BEST JERSEY

for the world's best club jackets. Club jackets in 'Crimplene' jersey, like this one, are new. Relaxing, but stylish. Not at all stuffy. Certainly not sloppy. Right.

WHY?

1. Style. Real style.
Unashamedly
good-looking.

2. Material.

'Crimplene' jersey.
Sort of 'Terylene'.

You know what that means. Best-behaved material there is.

Strictly no creases.

Firm, shapely,
but lots of give.

Washable. No pressing.

'Oxford'. About £4.19.6.

By Kilspindie.

'Crimplene' jersey is the soft, jersey form of 'Terylene', and always keeps its shape.

Robinson & Cleaver are blossoming out!

Come along and see just how. This is shopping on a bed of roses! And very nice, too.

The whole store has been re-designed. All departments better laid out, easier to find. More space; more light. Brighter displays. New paint, inside and out. Some sizzling colours. And look at the windows! We've really gone to town with them.

The one thing that hasn't changed is the service. Pleasing you is what we and all our staff are here for, just the same as always.

Will I find a good choice?

You will! That's the new Robinson & Cleaver. Honest-to-goodness conservative or kookie—we stock the best of both. Because we want to please all customers. Quality? Remains the same. The best for your money.

Can I buy lingerie?

As much as you like. And knitwear. Handkerchiefs galore. Stockings. Scarves. Delicious things for the bottom drawer, of course. And, yes, we do have the size and colour you want. So come and be tempted. Regent Street, as before.

How we got our good name

Once there was a Mr. Stratton and a Mr. Instone, and they had a place of business in Pall Mall where gentlemen would drop in from time to time to discuss the purchase of a Daimler motor car.

And there was a butler, complete in knee breeches, who brought oysters and champagne up to the Directors' room promptly at eleven each morning. Those really were the days.

Mr. Stratton and Mr. Instone have gone, along with the butler and the oysters. But their names are still echoed in the name of the firm they founded, and so are the principles of fair-dealing, expert knowledge and civility upon which, and solely upon which, they transacted their business.

Those clients who have already visited us know just what we mean.

The International Building Exhibition 1965 starts at Olympia this week. Among the exhibitors are the Carron Group of Companies, who specialize in baths, basins and sinks; among their exhibits are their new vanity basins (above) rimmed with stainless steel. These basins are large (22 in by 18 in and 20 in by 16 in), crisply designed and, unlike some washbasins hanging around, are entirely of the 20th century. They are available in colour-enamelled finish to match the range of Carron baths, and cost from £8 10s in white and from £10 6s in colour, from builders' merchants. Not exhibited, alas, are samples of some of the earliest baths made by this company. They sold at prices ranging from 39s to 156s, were "becomingly jappanned" in art nouveau designs and patterns easily recognizable as Early Op Art. The bath shown below was made in 1904. Exhibition open from 17 November to 1 December, admission 5s. Open from 10 to 6 Monday, Wednesday and Saturday; from 10 to 8 Tuesday, Thursday and Friday

Harrods on Monday 15 November are opening a shop within the store which will stock goods imported from India. Called the Shalimar Room, it will be on the first floor and will tend to the Eastern exotic; among the stock will be men's smoking jackets in heavy silk (this one, below, is in navy blue, 17 guineas) and overblouses in sharp bright colours, encrusted with hand-embroidery. The one on the left is in shocking pink, with crusty gold braiding, 39 guineas. The small brass box (far left) with an embossed flower on the lid is available in three sizes, small size 25s. # Christmas double!

Here's the ideal Christmas present for people with an eye for colour, a feeling for history, a love of country life and a sense of occasion.

The Illustrated London News Christmas Number is not just a magazine made to look seasonal. It's a work of art in itself.

It includes 24 pages of superlative colour, together with a front cover reproducing Canaletto's breathtaking painting of Westminster Abbey. The latter ties in with a feature written to mark the Abbey's 900th anniversary. Then there will be over seven pages of colour on Royalty as artists, with paintings by Queen Victoria, the daughters of George III, and the Duchesses of Kent and Gloucester; a feature on how artists over the centuries have painted the River Thames; colour features on the Iranian Crown Jewels and animals of the Antarctic.

Holly Leaves will have something to interest you whoever you are. In colour, there's a decorative arrangement of the signs of the Zodiac: two pages of specially commissioned paintings of pheasants, by Dr Eric Ennion: a picture by Peter Biegel, the sporting artist, of the ride home after a day's hunting; a feature on Sussex church porches, and paintings of Joan of Arc, Herbertonford village in Devon, and the tinsel glamour of the Punch & Judy show. Black and white features include illustrated articles on the Witches of the North Country, Gamekeepers of the old days, Balloons and Airships, Engraved Glassware from the fourteenth to the nineteenth centuries, Thatching in East Anglia—and a Countryman's Quiz.

The Christmas Numbers of The Illustrated London News and Holly Leaves cost only 6s each including post. # PERSONAL COLUMN

Some people will believe anything

While the rest of us sleep easily at night, heedless of the dangers of sudden annihilation, a small group of people remains constantly watchful – observing, recording and analysing the hazards which threaten us. They are the members of the British Unidentified Flying Object Research Association. Once a month, they meet in Kensington Central Library to report on their findings.

The other evening, the Association held a public brains trust. There were between 250 and 300 people in the hall. The six members of the panel were introduced by the chairman, Dr Geoffrey Doel, a neat, precise physician who manages to discuss the presence of hostile Beings from outer space in the reassuring manner of a man diagnosing a slight case of influenza.

The team included Mr Gordon Creighton ("He was in Intelligence during the war. He has information from under the Iron Curtain through means we know not of"), Mr Gavin Gibbons ("He has witnessed UFOs, perhaps more of them than any of us will ever witness. He is one of the favoured few"), and Mr John Cleary-Baker ("Our journal editor. He had experience of Warminster. He did a very noble piece of work there"). Some of the inhabitants of Warminster recently thought they were being bothered by Beings. Mr Cleary-Baker supported their view.

Dr Doel stressed that the Society was not interested in "cultists". It was all very scientific, he said.

The first questioner asked whether UFOs had ever been seen entering the sea. Mr Colin McCarthy, a bearded young Australian, said yes, some young girls had seen a dome-shaped object hover over a creek near Darwin in 1963, causing the sea to boil. It cooled the moment the object disappeared. A middle-aged lady with grey hair and a violet cardigan said that a red UFO had come up out of the sea near Lynmouth. Mr Gibbons said that, on 24 March 1955, one had floated down towards the sea off the Welsh coast. Mr Creighton said he had seen it himself.

A young engineer on the panel, Mr Alan Sharp, was sceptical. Why did the sea cool off so suddenly, he asked. We passed briskly to the next question.

If the Occupants of flying saucers came from another galaxy, someone wanted to know, wouldn't it take them thousands, even millions of years? Mr Sharp said, yes, it would. Perhaps, many generations of Beings were born and died during the voyage. Mr Cleary-Baker said "it might be possible to cover huge distances by sidetracking the dimensions of time." Perhaps they just put the Crew into cold storage. Mr Steven Smith, an extremely shy young Cambridge graduate, said: "Who is to say that another Being does not live a lifetime of 1,000 years?" Nobody present, anyway. Mr Cleary-Baker said: "There might be some shocks in store for those who, very confidently in their earthly laboratories, lay down the dimensions of the universe exactly. Mr Creighton said: "I was once talking to a very distinguished astronomer and physicist, I won't tell you his name, and I

continued overleaf

Dakota Staton, (above) the jazz singer now appearing at Annie's Room, has been in Britain since May. She was born in Pittsburgh, worked her way through high school. "I started singing when I was 16," she says. "But that's never what I thought I'd be. Those people, you know, great people, they seemed so far above me. And so much older. I couldn't understand it had anything to do with learning. But it has. You have to go out there and crawl." She joined the biggest local band, Joe Whitey's, then went on to become a single act in Detroit and Chicago. She has made 16 LPs, the latest entitled Dakota With Strings

Julie Felix (on facing page), the Californian folk-singer, has been touring this country looking for English folk-songs. She will be singing some of her discoveries at a concert at the Fairfield Hall, Croydon, on Friday 26 November. Three days later the first of her two shows will be broadcast on BBC-2 said to him: 'You are a very distinguished astronomer and physicist, and I'm just an amateur, tell me how much has your astronomy helped you to know where these Things are coming from?' And he replied: 'I haven't a clue!'"

Mr Creighton folded his arms over his stomach and gazed with satisfaction at the audience, happy to have settled the point so convincingly.

Somebody asked why, when most people have never set eyes on a UFO, some enthusiasts seem to see them all the time. Mr Smith thought it was because these people kept their eyes peeled and were always looking out for UFOs. Mr Creighton couldn't understand why the Japanese were always seeing them. "The Japanese," he said, "do have very bad eyesight." Mr Gibbons said he has seen 16. Mr Gibbons said that Australian Aborigines saw them quite often. They thought they were the lights of their ancestors hopping about in the sky. Mr Gibbons pondered this remark and then said that people who were lying ill in bed ought to devote their time to looking through the window in the hope of seeing UFOs.

Was it significant, another questioner asked, that Warminster was only seven miles from Stonehenge, renowned for its association with Druids? Mr Gibbons stamped on this one. A woman who claimed to be in telepathic communication with the Pilot of a UFO, he said, had telephoned to point out that a straight line drawn between Glastonbury and Stonehenge (both Druidical sites) passed through Warminster.

"We looked it up," he said. "It turned out that the line passed some miles south of Warminster!"

Mr Creighton said: "I think they're here on their own business, not on ours. They're mostly here at night. They're not trying to attract our attention, far from it."

And the chairmansaid: "They seem to have an uncanny psychological knowledge of where to come down and when. They've got it taped. It would be so easy for one of them to come down in Hyde Park for half an hour in the day time, but that's not their purpose."

Just before the tea interval, a youth in the audience rose and asked: "Do you attach any significance to the fact that it is reported in the Bible that Elijah was carried off in a fiery chariot?" The members of the panel smiled indulgently. There was no significance at all, they said.

It was good to hear this ridiculous notion scotched. Fiery chariots! Some people will believe anything.

exhibition of work by the Vorticist Group of artists, which was founded by the late Wyndham Lewis in 1914. It included paintings by Roberts, who had been a member of the group in 1914 but who soon broke away from the influence of the dominating Lewis. The exhibition devoted a good deal of space (and the catalogue most of the glory) to Wyndham Lewis.

Roberts was furious, and pub-acquire all the credit for Vorticism at the expense of other members of the group. In a second pamphlet, he accused Sir John of lending official support to what he called the "Leader legend".

Letters flew to the weekly reviews. Sir John replied. Roberts issued yet another pamphlet containing letters which the weekly reviews had declined to publish. He accused Sir John of giving an inaccurate account of his (Roberts's) life in his biographical work, Modern British Painters.

Sir John retired as Director of the Tate last autumn. The new Director is Mr Norman Reid.

Roberts, an obsessively retiring man, is now 70. He lives with his wife and son, who is a musician, in a house overlooking a canal near Regent's Park. He now refuses to exhibit in any private galleries - his last exhibition was at the Leicester Galleries several years ago.

Each summer, he submits his year's work to the Royal Academy - he is an ARA - and manages to make enough from his sales there to last him through the year. In the past few weeks, his wife has converted a small room in the house into a sort of home gallery from which she sells pictures to private buyers. They are not well off, she says, but they can live on these two sources of income. "Our needs," she adds, looking round the rather barely furnished room, "are not great."

Roberts, the son of a carpenter, was apprenticed to a poster firm after leaving school. He was an official war artist in the 1914-18 and 1939-45 wars. His style has changed comparatively little since he broke away from the angular Cubism of the Vorticists half a century ago. He continues to paint his carefully engineered arrangements of rigid, sculptured figures, showing no emotion.

His admirers mention the Florentines and Piero. Sir John has used the unflattering phrase "tubular-limbed puppets."

He is no longer neglected. The prices for his paintings have gone up in the last few years. But, more than most living artists of his generation, he feels slightly embittered by

William Roberts - as he sees himself

Roberts declares peace

The retrospective exhibition of paintings by William Roberts, which opens at the Tate Gallery on Saturday 20 November, will celebrate a truce, if not an armistice, in a comic opera war between the artist and the gallery.

It began in 1956. Sir John Rothenstein, who was then Director of the Tate, held an lished privately a pamphlet entitled "Shanghaied" or "Vorticism Resurrected, a Sea Yarn for Abstract Artists." It opened with this sentence: "This relates how, in the month of July, in the year 1956, I was bound and gagged by a press-gang and forced to serve aboard the old hulk 'Vorticism' then lying off Millbank by Thames-side, under the command of Captain 'Manifesto' Lewis and his chief mate 'Little' John..."

He claimed that his paintings had been exhibited without his permission and expressed great irritation at Lewis's introduction to the catalogue in which, Roberts said, he was trying to real (and perhaps imagined) slights. Perhaps the Tate exhibition will heal some of the wounds.

With his own butler, P J Proby can always go back to song-writing

The time comes in the career of every pop singer when the fickle teenage fans desert him for a new idol and he must either adapt himself to a more mature audience or disappear from the entertainment scene forever. P J Proby has decided to desert the kids before they desert him.

Proby, who was 27 last Saturday, is to be re-packaged for a new market. His extravagant appearance and frenetic style of singing will be abandoned for a more demure manner, and he will sing different songs. Quieter ones.

The other afternoon he held a small salon in his house off the King's Road to announce the change. Mr Proby, wearing a blue velvet smock and white slacks, his long hair fastened in a pigtail by an elastic band, sat on a sofa beneath a portrait of himself in white satin and buckle shoes. ("That's by Delmo Veronese, a direct descendant of the Veronese," he said.)

His personal advisers sat in a tight circle about him. Photographers orbited around them, flashing bulbs. Beyond them stood another ring of dimmer functionaries. And, at the furthest reaches of this solar system, small girls (presumably admirers) perpetually twinkled into vision and disappeared again.

Mr Barry Langford, a former BBC producer who now produces him, said: "Jim Proby is the biggest extrovert who's ever appeared on the stage in this country. He has a tremendous voice. He doesn't need gimmicks. We're preparing an act that could go straight into Talk of the Town or even to Vegas. He'll sing big ballads – Somewhere, Maria, that sort of thing. I'm convinced from the reactions of my own wife and from my mother, who is 63, that it will go over. He's right at the top now. He still gets his standard fee for personal appearances: £700 a night. He's chucking it up to go into cabaret at £4,000 a week. Would you agree with my sentiments, Mr P?"

Mr Proby, who was gazing into a mirror and combing his hair, said: "Right!"

"We're going to start right now making a new Jim Proby," said Mr Langford. "He's doing what a boxer does, he's going into training. Buddy Bregman is the man who's changing the act. He'll live with Jim for three weeks. The whole operation will cost £5,500. The trouble with Jim, he's a perfectionist. We're putting a 14-piece band together of top British musicians. We're buying special lighting. There'll be new costumes, new arrangements. It'll be a completely new act from top to bottom. I think it's going to shake a lot of people. Jim, if he was to take six months off and go back to have his voice trained to what it was before, why he could sing in musicals."

Mr Proby lit a large cigar, carefully prised the cap off a bottle of English lager, took a long, slow swig, and said: "By the time we're ready to go into Talk of the Town, the act'll be gauged to audiences of all ages. I want to make this change, Bobby Darin did it, he did it, didn't he? Paul Anka has done it. Elvis has never done it, because Elvis can't sing that kind of music."

"You must realise I'm not allowed in any major theatre in England, only in small independent cinemas and crummy ballrooms. I'm being forced out of the teenage business. The Government will not allow me to appear before the teenagers."

"Ah, um, I don't think it's the Government, Jim," said Mr Langford. "It's the theatre managers."

"That's right," said Mr Proby, "the theatre managers. I've been confined to places where I can only make £300 a night. I can't run my life on £300 a night. I need £1,000 a week for basic overheads."

Mr Langford said: "Jim Proby has his own full-time hairdresser and his own butler."

"I can always go back to song-writing," said Mr Proby.

Tilt-taker

Denis Tuohy (above), the link-man on BBC-2's Line-Up Review on Friday nights, started his broadcasting career as an announcer with the BBC in Northern Ireland. Tuohy, a Catholic, says: "Nobody outside Ulster can appreciate the significance of a Catholic being allowed to read the BBC's news bulletin. It was never publicly announced that I was one of them, but they can tell from the name, which is Southern Irish, and they can tell from the way you look." For a time, he wrote, produced and appeared in a series of satirical shows. "Taking a tilt at bigotry in Belfast requires a certain amount of lunacy," he says. "The satirical shows caused endless rows and most of the love poems I read were called obscene and immoral." He joined BBC-2 18 months ago, became an anchor-man on Line-Up, which introduced the evening's programmes. Largely because of Tuohy's argumentative charm, the programme expanded and was switched to the end of the evening as Late-Night Line-Up. In his present Friday night spot, he has developed a refreshing personal style.

Concert soprano Denny Dayviss (above) is marrying Al Mancini, the American actor who came to Britain as a member of the TW3 team on BBC-TV, at Caxton Hall on Tuesday 23 November. Miss Dayviss is the daughter of a South African shipping man. She arrived in London to study at the Royal Academy of Music and now divides her time between recitals here and in South Africa. Last Christmas she played in pantomime in Manchester. She says she sings in eight languages, including Zulu. Mancini is the son of a London shoemaker – the London in Ohio, that is. He is now working on a six-part comedy serial, provisionally called Stavros – Ace Immigrant, to appear on TV next spring. Immediately after the wedding, Mancini will fly to Greece to appear in a film about Noah and Miss Dayviss will start rehearsing for a recital at the Wigmore Hall in December

FROM THE JOKE FACTORY

NOT merely prime ministers and presidents, but many who are totally committed to show biz have their jokes and ad-libs written for them by professionals nowadays. Any one of Bob Hope's battery of supercharged gag writers can count on $50,000 a year and Simpson and Galton, authors of Steptoe and Son, reputedly earn £20,000 annually as a team. But the joke-writing profession is not without its more modest practitioners, many of whom advertise in Variety or the insipid, poorly-written British equivalent, Stage; and for some years now I have been answering their small ads and buying material for as little as 10s for, say, A TASTY PACKET from SMITH'S (original) SCRIPTS.

"I got thrown out of a big store the other day. I only asked for some assorted tarts. Trouble was I went up to the wrong counter."

My first venture in joke-buying was with a man who signs his letters: "Your Fun-Maker, Fred Fortune", and who, for a pound, sent me his ORIGINAL GIANT FOLIO. Included in the grab-bag of mimeographed sheets was some Original Quick Cross-Talk for Straight (A) & COMEDIAN (B).

A. Do you travel much?

B. I used to, but I turned it up.

A. Why?

B. I travelled in ladies' underwear for a year and caught cold.

A. I mean travel abroad - Norway?

B. No, I went the other way - to Italy.

A. Touch Florence?

B. I didn't have a chance, her mother was always with her.

For a further pound Mr Fortune offered, among other delights, "THE VICAR AND THE CURATE, Clean funny gags & patter for Comedy Clerics" and "A SEAT IN THE PARK, Smashing cross-talk for Lady & Pick-Up Percy". Two burlesque song titles strongly recommended by Mr Fortune were If The Bed Breaks In The Middle, Meet Me In The Spring and She Was Only The Sergeant's Daughter, But She Wouldn't Let The Police

Inspector. His FUN FOLIO was not without social content.

A. Don't you know the Queen's English?

B. I know the Queen's not French.

A. Haven't you had any education?

B. A college education.

A. Have you been to Eton?

B. I've been to Eton, Drinking, and Smoking.

Fred Fortune's mimeographed letter (THE ROAD THAT LEADS TO FORTUNE) warned: "I am the Originator of the particular service; others copy my Style but they'll never IMITATE the QUALITY". All the same, some time later I did write to another joke writer, Keith Cooper of Manchester. Mr Cooper informed me that, at the moment, he had 73 joke sheets for sale and the price was 5s for ten. With his "Cream of Jokes", Mr Cooper enclosed a sales sheet and among the items offered was, "Turning from the ridiculous to the sublime, a straight monologue entitled THE STONE . . . showing the way in which some people view RELIGION. This monologue will give offence to no one, whether they be Church of England, Methodist or Roman Catholic". Price, 3s. But I didn't send away for it as I was not much taken with Mr Cooper's Cream-sheet. Sample: "I called in a pub the other night with the wife. She said, 'Look at that couple over there. They've been married 30 years and he's holding her hand.' I said, 'Yes, he has to or she would hit him over the head with it.'"

A WELL-KNOWN Hollywood comedy writer now living in London told me that the definitive gag-file was compiled in the thirties by an empirical writernamed David Freedman. It was born of necessity, that is to say radio. Freedman, like so many others, used to write sketches for Broadway shows and revues - routines that could run and bring in royalties for a year or two - when he was suddenly faced with radio, a national audience, and the need for new, if not exactly fresh, comedy weekly. Freedman put his entire family to work, clipping newspapers and magazines in many languages, and compiled an enormous joke hoard with a scientific system of cross-filing. Based on this HUMOURHEAP OF FORT KNOX OF FUN, if one may enter freely into the spirit of the idiom, Freedman wrote or administered the jokes for The Eddie Cantor Show, The Rudy Vallee Show, and others. Many of today's most successful television comedy writers were once apprentices in the Freedman factory, though the importance of the two-liner has diminished considerably since the situation comedy has come into fashion.

David Freedman's library of humour was, they say, ultimately worth a fortune, but other American material comes cheaper, as I discovered when I answered Billy Glason's ad in Variety and sent him three dollars for a sample copy of the PROFESSIONAL monthly comedy service, THE COMEDIAN.

"Dear Friend," Glason wrote, "WE SERVICE THE STARS - the biggest names in Show-Business: COMEDIANS, WRITERS, HOME TALENT PRODUCERS, AFTER-DINNER SPEAKERS, TEACHERS, PROFESSORS . . . COLUMNISTS . . . LIBRARIES . . . UNIVERSITIES . . . PENAL INSTITUTIONS, RELIGIOUS ORGANISATIONS SUCH AS CHURCHES . . . and anyone else who has to use a bit of humour or comedy in their work . . ." Glason, who signs himself "To wit, Billy Glason", assured me that he supplied "the mostest material at the lowest prices". Among the fabulous items Glason offered from stock were "HUMOR-DOR FOR EMCEES, A Complete Encyclopedia of Comedy Material," $100; "THE BLUE BOOK (STRICTLY FOR STAGS) - many night-club performers use this in a 'cleaned-up' manner", two volumes for $75; "GIANT ENCYCLOPEDIA OF CLASSIFIED GAGS", 20 volumes for $1000; and the "PEDRO COLLECTION, GAGS & ROUTINES WITH A SPANISH FLAVOUR!", $25. Fun-Master song parodies that sounded bouncy came at $5 each. My favourites were "JUNE IS BUSTIN' OUT ALL OVER, 2 VERSIONS, ONE A PREGNANT VERSION and the other a DIET VERSION . . . one is CLEAN, the other is NOT"; "THE LAST TIME I SAW PARIS (MORRIS), 4 different versions, 3 are rather sophisticated, the other is CLEAN"; "WHAT A DIFFERENCE A DAY (DAME) MADE, good and zingy, if that's what you want"; and "IRELAND MUST BE HEAVEN (THEY CALLED IT IRELAND) . . . CLEAN! An Irishman throws bricks at a Jewish friend who saved them and built a hotel."

G LASON wrote: "FUN-MASTER IS PROFESSIONAL. FUN-MASTER IS JUST-PRO-PULSION." He also warned that he made "NO CHANGES, accepted NO RETURNS, and gave NO SAMPLES. EVERYTHING IS PREPAID." Glason's FUN-MASTER MONTHLY, the mimeographed COMEDIAN, contained, as promised, AUDIENCE LINES, AFTER THE ACT LINES, BAND AND ORK LINES, CROSS-OVERS, FLORIDA GAGS, HECKLERS, INSULTS, JUNE BRIDES, KNOCK KNOCKS, LAS VEGAS GAGS, ONE LINERS, RESORT GAGS, SQUELCHES, SARCASM, TEXAS GAGS, TOMMY MANVILLE GAGS and THOUGHTS OF THE DAY.

Following, a representative selection.

STORIES: A space ship landed in the Congo and a Martian stepped out and asked a Congo soldier to take him to his leader. The soldier said, "Lumumba or Kasavubu?" and the Martian said, "Take me to your leader, we'll dance later." ONE LINERS: This year I'm going to vote a straight ticket, just as soon as I find out which party is going straight. IF AUDIENCE STARTS TO APPLAUD AFTER A GAG: Please! I'd rather not be obligated. HECKLERS: I know you're not a North-woods hunter. THEY only open their traps three times a year . . . or . . . Hecklers make me feel like an elevator operator. It isn't the ups and downs that bother me, it's the jerks. HUMOROUS VIEWS OF THE NEWS: I read where Khrushchev received a cable from the Congo, please send us more communist agents, that last batch was delicious.

And here's one of Billy Glason's DOUBLE GAGS.

"You ought to read books."

"I do. I like LITTLE WOMEN."

"Little women?"

"Yeah. In fact I like them better than books. When I was a kid I always had my nose in a book."

BY MORDECAI RICHLER

"What's the matter, couldn't your mother afford a handkerchief?"

On balance, British joke vendors advertising in Stage ("If I should 'die', think only this of me: I should have got my comedy act from JO HOYLES") offered routines at much more reasonable prices than Billy Glason. Jo Hoyles, for instance, sells part rights on comedy material for as little as 3s a turn. I was particularly attracted by two skits listed in Hoyle's catalogue. "REJUVENATION, This is about an oldish man who is married to a wife much younger than himself. She persuades him to have an operation so that he will become young again. This is an original treatment of an old theme. Clean. There is nothing vulgar about it. Plays eight minutes. 5s." The other was "TWO OF A KIND, By a strange coincidence, father and son are in love with the same girl. Clean. Plays five minutes. 4s." John Slattery, yet another joke writer, sent me 25 gags ("Lots of burglars about lately, aren't there? I know a woman who had her bottom pinched") for a pound, as well as a kind personal letter, telling me how tough it was to break in a new act nowadays. Mr Slattery's fee for writing exclusive material is £2 a minute; £16 for eight minutes, with a £5 deposit and the balance when the final script is approved.

But the most high-pressured, hard-sell, and prolific of the various gag writers I contacted was certainly Peter Cagney. The incomparable Cagney. Before driving down to visit Cagney in Hove I answered his ad in Stage ("20,000 LAUGHS!") and sent him money for an assortment of jokes and routines. Immediately Mr Cagney, who tailors gags for the individual comic, wrote to ask whether my STYLE WAS CHEEKY OR SLOW-WITTED. He asked for photographs and tape-recordings of my voice. In his MEMO FROM THE GAG FACTORY FOREMAN, Cagney wrote: "Entertainers everywhere have come to rely on Cagney's - their success is our bread and butter. We welcome all comedians . . .

whether you need one brilliant topical gag or a complete 30-minute television situation comedy series, we can meet the demand with expertise and rapidity, and guarantee a top TAM rating!" On another page in the catalogue, Cagney runs testimonials from satisfied stars such as Bebe Daniels & Ben Lyon ("Thank you for the fine scripts"), Ken Dodd ("Great material"), Max Miller ("Excellent") and Dick Haynes ("Made the show"). He also claims to have written material for THE WORLD'S GREAT COMICS in Brazil, aboard the Queen Mary, in Ghana, Bermuda, and Canada. "GET IN THE SWIM," he urges. "HIT THE HIGHSPTS. USE ONLY BRILLIANT CAGNEY COMEDY! . . . NO OTHER scriptwriters in the world have such a magnificent and widespread record of assignments . . . our writers are ALSO established and well-known novelists - two of them under contract to Herbert Jenkins Ltd, Kometforlaget (Stockholm), Cité de la Presses (Paris) and publishers in Spain, USA, Germany, and Portugal. THE ONLY OTHER WAY WE CAN CONVINCE YOU THAT WE ARE TRULY THE BEST, IS TO BLEED FOR YOU . . . AND THIS CAN ALSO BE ARRANGED. A Comedian's success is 60 per cent. his script. Invest in YOURSELF - today!"

I INVESTED £5, and the bundle I got by return mail included a spill of familiar jokes ("Do you know who is the lightweight champion of our town? Our grocer"), breast jokes, and variations on familiar breast jokes. I also received a copy of the M.C.'s COMPLETE ALBUM FOR DANCES AND PARTIES, fully copyrighted and available in seven languages, like the rest of Cagney's material. One Party Game highly recommended by Cagney is the STRIP JACK NAKED ELIMINATION. "The MC calls for garments to be removed by the male partner at each break. Sooner or later some men will voluntarily quit, but the best of them will go on to the end. Start with necktie, tunic collars, and belts, braces, etc. Do NOT go beyond reasonable bounds! For fun, a stooge might be planted in the contest, wearing highly-coloured tartan football knickers, and this one might remove his trousers when all the others have been eliminated. Give prize to genuine winner, of course."

Peter Cagney, lean, nervy, and 46 years old, told me that he has been a writer for 30 years. Cagney is not only a comedy writer. He has written novels, thrillers, stories, and musicals, and for a while after the war he published his own magazine, Stag.

"Eventually they all come to me," Cagney said. "There's nobody who can compete with me for comedy writing today —"

"What about . . . Simpson and Galton?"

"Simpson and Galton! What did they do before they wrote comedy? They were amateurs. Did you see that double page spread on Simpson and Galton in the Express or the Mail? It shows one of them lying on a sofa and the other half-asleep in a chair . . . and it says, Portrait of Two Comedy Writers Thinking. Thinking! Who has time to think? I can write a 30-minute television comedy script, complete with technical details, in 20 minutes. I'm a professional . . . There's nobody who can compete with me for comedy writing today. I get all sorts of calls, you know. From somebody making a speech at the boiler-makers' dinner who needs a few cracks to a complete 30-minute script for Swedish TV. I've done the lot."

Cagney pointed out a glassed-in bookcase to me.

"I've written 40 million words - 78 books - you'd think I'd have a bloody fortune, wouldn't you? I mean those words aren't stuff that's gone into the waste paper basket. Published. The lot. Then you take somebody like Braine, he writes one flipping book - it's serialised in the Express and he's made.

"Braine writes a book - a flash in the pan, isn't it? I mean I'm for authorship. That's what I stand for. I've written 78 books - no, 84. Unless it's a property - a bound book - there's no future in it. Now look," he said, hitting the bookcase, "I'd back any of these books - any of them - against what's his-name - that geezer Fleming.

He made a fortune. A load of cod's wallop it was, too."

I asked Cagney if he still wrote books.

"No. I had a contract with Herbert Jenkins, four books a year, but what with all the other work I do it was taking me something like eight weeks to get rid of them. So I had to give it up, the novels, it was crippling. The flaming agent takes 30 per cent., you know, and even with the translations I was only earning an average of £300 a book . . . Once," Cagney said, slumping on the sofa, "Columbia was going to buy 12 of them . . . Well, it fell through."

Cagney told me he only earns about £20 a week, after expenses. He has three children.

"You're always waiting for the lucky break. It's sheer luck, you know. I do more work in three weeks than Simpson and Galton do in a year. I write for working man's clubs and holiday camps, that's a market the big money boys ignore, isn't it?"

PETER CAGNEY has been a joke writer since 1952. He has, he told me, some 2000 regular clients and about 100 of them buy material from him on a monthly basis. Last year Cagney's catalogue of STAG GAGS, CLUBLAND SPECIALS, VISIGAGS, PATTERN PARADES, and COMEDY ACTS made for a turnover of about £1500.

Had he ever tried London, I asked.

"London? It's a closed shop. I mean TV, it's a closed ring, isn't it? There must be 20,000 comedy writers in this country, but if you look over 15 years' copies of the Radio Times I'll bet you won't find 20 new names. Look," Cagney said, "you tell me, what's the best comedy show in TV?"

"Well —"

"The Beverly Hillbillies. And I can do better. I know from the testimonials I get that I could write a better show than any on the air. But it's a closed shop at the BBC. It should be investigated. Muir and Norden now. Who ever heard of them before they were well-known?"

New girls

Tony Townsend (above), born 1945 to a Broadway actress, has wanted to be an actress herself since she saw Mary Martin in Peter Pan when she was seven. She has got as far as being a RADA student and has had two screen tests. She claims she was spotted by a film producer in Oxford Street and chased into a store. "Then they examined my teeth, all the time. They said

"That one sticks out. It'll catch the light. We can change them'. I said: 'Do you want the actress or the teeth?' I wore braces for seven years. That was enough. No braces now"

Edina Ronay (right), 22-year-old daughter of food guide Egon, was born in Budapest, studied art at St Martin's, did six months in repertory and two years at RADA. She has appeared on TV (The Avengers, Riviera Police) and in six films.

Her latest, and biggest, part is a harlot in the new Sherlock Holmes film A Study in Terror, now at the Leicester Sq Theatre

Gillian Hills (below), began her acting career at the age of 14 with a film she never made. Roger Vadim saw a photograph of her and signed her up. A plane-load of journalists immediately descended on Nice, where she was at school, to interview her. But Vadim withdrew the part, Gillian left school and never looked back. She has played in four films, including Beat Girl, and The Golden Goddess of Rio Beni. Now 21, Gillian also sings—and she has a folksy record, Look at Them, out on Friday 19 November

TONY RANDALL

Perhaps the biggest show-business phenomenon of the last ten years has been the success of the Doris Day-Rock Hudson movies: Pillow Talk, Lover Come Back, Send Me No Flowers. Some people have found it puzzling—Day is scarcely the most glamorous performer in the world, and neither is Hudson the most talented. But it becomes easier to understand when one remembers that these vehicles also featured Tony Randall, one of the funniest actors in films. "I think the three of us are awfully good together," he says. "Somehow we jell, it's just like marriage or a friendship, you can't explain why it works."

Randall is 41, a slight, talkative, amiable man with that oddly featureless quality often found in offscreen comedians (Jack Lemmon has it too). He's been an actor since he was 17: "I did everything, but principally the classics. I never made a name or made big money until I went into a TV comedy show called Mr Peepers, and that established me." Soon after he moved to Hollywood, and in 1957 appeared in Frank Tashlin's Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter? (known in England as The Girl Can't Help It). He still thinks this the best film he ever made, and Tashlin remains his favourite director. On the day after it was finished, he started work on No Down Payment—"my only serious film part. Remember the scene where Sheree North and I scream at each other? Well, Jerry Wald called me early the next morning and said: 'It's the best thing ever put on celluloid!' Years later I reminded him of this, and he said: 'I still say it's a good scene'. Not quite the same, was it?" Then he was cast as a harassed, hungover playboy in the first of the Day-Hudson series.

"Pillow Talk was a big success so we made it again and called it Lover Come Back. In some cases my lines in both movies were verbatim—though they were coarser in the second one, and I must add funnier.

Photograph by John Carter

Lover Come Back was an even bigger success than Pillow Talk. But we decided not to push our luck in the third one, and abandoned the theme of Doris's virginity. When you look at the movies, it's really she who's after Rock Hudson's virginity. Remember at the end of Lover Come Back, when she's finally caught him and he says just before the clinch: 'Be kind'?"

Randall was staying briefly at the Dorchester to finish work on his latest film, a comedy-thriller called Marrakesh. "With Terry-Thomas and Wilfred Hyde-White—who lives in Palm Springs, California which is exactly like Marrakesh, he might just as well have stayed home. And Senta Berger. In the love scene she said to me: 'Kiss my mouse'. I told her—better not print this—I'd love to kiss her mouse! I told Senta I'd be like a big brother to her and help her with her English. After the love scene she said: 'You kiss your sister like that'?"

His last two films before Marrakesh have yet to be shown in England. In The Alphabet Murders he plays Hercule Poirot ("Agatha Christie will not approve") directed again by Tashlin. The Seven Faces of Doctor Lao will be released at the end of this month: "It may not be the best movie I've ever made, but it's the best thing I've ever done in movies, actingwise as they say."

Tony Randall had been the night before to a concert at the Wigmore Hall. "A remarkable woman pianist. She played like a man—and there's a lot of men around playing like women, all sensitive, you know. This was old-fashioned thumping with lots of mistakes, but full of feeling. Am I musical? Well, I studied singing but I seem to have no talent—just the urge."

He was due to fly to New York the next day to start rehearsals for a Broadway show (his first for seven years) called UTBU. The initials stand for Unpleasant To Be Unkind. "It's about an international gang of assassins dedicated to ridding the world of undesirable characters. Alan Webb plays the chief operative, a 65-year-old blind man, and I'm his principal target, a 75-year-old actor trying to murder my 95-year-old mother—that's Thelma Ritter. The point is, will Webb get me before I get Thelma?"

American actors visiting England invariably rave about the English theatre and, if they can, about the country as a whole; Randall was no exception. "I came here for one day a year ago June and stayed five weeks, I had that great a time. The sun shone every day—for me England is a land of eternal sunlight. A few mornings it rained, but then it looked like something by Constable: Even Italy wasn't that beautiful. I saw Olivier's Othello one day and his Master Builder the next. I couldn't believe that marvellous an actor could be that bad an actor the next day. Don't mistake me: I think Olivier's the greatest actor in the whole world. Part of his greatness is in doing what he's not suited to. In my little world they only cast you in things you've proved you can do. We're never miscast in the States. I'd love to fail gloriously. It's too easy for us over there. Brando could have been the greatest actor in history. Everybody knew that. But he was content with things as they were. And Laurette Taylor—that was the end, acting at its best. But neither Taylor nor Brando were doing anything one-sixteenth as difficult as Olivier's Othello. The only other people in history who've been able to play Othello were Salvini and Kean. Bing Crosby singing White Christmas is very nice, but it's easy compared to Rigoletto. That's the difference between our theatre and yours."

"I'd love to work for Olivier at the National Theatre. He might be willing, but the charter wouldn't allow it. I think I could do some of the parts Robert Stephens plays—though not better than he.

They're going to do The Cherry Orchard in New York this fall and I wanted to play Gaev but they said I was too young, which was silly. They suggested Trofimov instead; I waited, but nothing happened. I think I could play Astrov in Uncle Vanya."

Is Randall frustrated by type-casting in comedy roles? Can he really want to play Hamlet? "It simply doesn't matter to me, comedy or drama. When I began I thought I could do everything, at the time I was so interested in directing I didn't value comedy or anything else too highly. I came in on the end of the generation of actors who were destroyed by John Barrymore. The older generation were still slavishly imitating him—some still do, take Fredric March. I'm the last of the people who worshipped Barrymore but I got out from under. It's like those mumblers at the Actors Studio—they're only imitating Brando. And English actors imitate Olivier—make their voices yelp like dogs. They always imitate the least important things."

At last—and it seemed reluctantly—he talked about comedy. "Well, it's got something to do with having a sense of humour. Real humour—which sometimes doesn't make you laugh. A lot of comedy writers have no sense of humour, just a collection of gags. It's something to do with the horse's assery of mankind. The fellow who has nowhere to go so he walks along very seriously, very importantly. Comedy is somewhere between what people are pretending, and the truth: the difference is funny. Chaplin is the greatest example of this. Chaplin! I thought of going to knock on his door at the Savoy and saying any time he wanted me I'd work for nothing. He'd probably hate that, think I was insincere. So I would be, insincere—any actor would be nuts to work for nothing! But I would, for him. Though I wouldn't pay my own expenses—he could pick up my hotel bill, couldn't he?"

What about comedy actresses? "Doris Day, above all. She's marvellous. People don't realise how good she is. She's very average, I mean she's not gorgeous, she doesn't look like a movie star, but she's absolutely spontaneous and she can be honestly funny. She has what we call 'high visibility'—the slightest thing that flashes through her mind, you see in her eyes immediately. That's a valuable thing for an actor. Real acting is not showing anything, but these things coming through involuntarily—like a puppy dog that looks so guilty you know it's done something wrong. When we were kids and used to play Old Maid, whenever my sister held the Queen of Spades we'd know at once from her face. That's what Doris has got."

"An actor only needs control in order to concentrate on one thing at a time—so ideally each moment of the play comes as a surprise. All this about 'impeccable technique'—it's a lot of mechanics that anybody can have. In the days of radio, before TV, they used to talk about 'microphone technique'—as if there were such a thing. What the hell is that? Knowing how far to stand away from the mike? When somebody talked about Toscanini's 'incredible baton technique' he said: 'I can teach anyone that in 15 minutes'. But to get a lot of tired old musicians to go back to when they were young and wanted to make music—he couldn't teach that. What was the secret? Love or hate or something. . . ."

"I've never understood about comedy technique. There are just various ways of underlining things so an audience gets the point. Never understood this thing called timing that I'm always praised for. Timing has to do with getting the laugh—not with whether it's funny or not. Audiences give you your timing. And with good lines, you don't need it. In the best stuff, the actor can take very little credit."

THE

RAHVIS SISTERS

BY PAULINE PETERS

Miss Raemonde says: "Don't you think today is rather inelegant?" Miss Dora says: "Ugghh, op art." A fashion writer says: "When I see someone draped in chiffon, I think 'Oh God, another Rahvis'."

Rahvis Couture has been flourishing in Upper Grosvenor Street since before the New Look, and is still going strong.

Photographs by Lord Snowdon

Before

It is a Tuesday afternoon at the salon of Rahvis Couture in Upper Grosvenor Street, ten days before the autumn collection is due to be shown. Outside it is sunny and sticky; inside cool and pale green. The showroom on the first floor is large and empty except for pockets of disarray and the muffled chatter of models in a curtained-off dressing room.

Dora Rahvis enters and the chattering stops. She peers round the room and marches behind the curtain. What about that hem, she says and a buzzing explanation follows. A few seconds later she swishes through the curtain moaning gently that everything is a mess. "It's all different when we do the show. You won't recognize it next week. Ugghh, I can't bear it before the collection. I'm all tense."

She sits on a small white-painted sofa. A telephone rings somewhere. A vendeuse with a lean face and a pale suit comes in with a message about a delivery date. Two men enter selling yellow boots that are the wrong shade.

Then Raemonde Rahvis, Dora's sister, enters, in a beige skirt and full length coat with a pale fur collar. She looks as if she is in control but she says she is distracted. Dora says what about that hem to her and she goes off to the models' room, a hand on her forehead, repeating "Oh this collection, oh this collection."

During

... ten days later. The autumn collection is about to start. Lots of taxis in the street outside, a few chauffeurs. Upstairs that speech-day look, staff with flushed faces and better clothes than normal.

Raemonde and Dora are nowhere to be seen. Little gold chairs are arranged in three tiers round the L-shaped show room, nearly all occupied.

Lady Abrahams dominates the scene, looking a bit like Queen Mary in high black with ostrich feathers wafting aloft from a pill-box. Somebody says did you see Anna Neagle arrive.

Three photographers. One of the men who was selling boots the week before is there, trying to open a window. Most of the women look like rather glossy clients. There are one or two young men and girls and a few middle-aged women who look as if they've come in to be entertained.

The models look very real. Two are dark and bright and very young. Another is a healthy neo-1920's. The boots man thinks the ash blonde one the most gorgeous.

The clothes with the most fur on, the most ingenious use of sequins get the most applause. The models drape their coats carefully, apart from the girl who has a full length mink and that she trails on the floor.

When it's over and the women are pushing slowly out, a chink appears in the dressing room curtain. Dora's face, ashen and loathing, appears for a second.

The collection has taken its toll.

After

Three weeks later, and this is an afternoon for clients to get to grips with the new collection. A screen at the far end of the room gives the private viewing additional intimacy. A vendeuse can be heard telling a client how terribly chic this number is and we have something similar in green.

A couple of models, waiting to be called, watch themselves dance in the wall mirrors.

A woman enters from the main door of the show room and asks to see one of the Misses Rahvis. She is from Iceland, a store buyer, who met the sisters at a party once. Dora comes in and shakes the woman's hand. The woman has to re-introduce herself. Dora says "Iceland? I thought you just wrapped yourselves up in fur and spent all your time cutting raw steaks with razors." The woman looks surprised.

It turns out the woman behind the screen has ordered something. The Icelandic buyer orders patterns so Icelandic women can have Rahvis clothes. A good afternoon.

This collection is doing good business.

tion not unlike one of his own paintings. He began his career as an artist at the age of 15 when he worked as a poster painter in Ciudad Bolivar. In 1950, he went to live in Paris, where he earned his living by playing the guitar in cafes and nightclubs. It took 15 years for his painting to be accepted.

4 Senta Berger, the 24-year-old Viennese actress (pictured here at a party in Soho), was discovered by the American film actor Richard Widmark when she was a 16-year-old drama student in her native city. He spotted her in the street while driving through Vienna, stopped the car, asked whether she was an actress and, when she said she wished to become one, arranged for a film test. She has appeared in The Victors, Major Dundee, The Spy With My Face and Cast A Giant Shadow.

5 This extraordinary picture of Gauguin, trouserless but unabashed, was taken in the studio of the artist Alphonse Mucha in Paris some time around the turn of the century.

Gauguin, then an unknown and derided painter, had returned from the East with his Polynesian mistress. The photograph is one of a series taken by Mucha and now in the possession of the Grosvenor Gallery. Some of Mucha's work is included in an exhibition of Art Nouveau which opens there on Thursday 18 November Sassoon's salon in Grosvenor House sets to fall a bit dippily over her eyebrows. She is short-sighted and peers at everything, narrowing her false eyelashes to the merest slits. Somebody once said she was like a very feline female leopard and she thought that the nicest thing ever said about her. You can often see her mind.

Her sister Raemonde is more on the vertical side with a good jaw and dark glasses. Imagine her as a girl, bright and all knees. She has taken up architecture and loves visiting country houses.

She is 18 months older than Dora. Raemonde likes young people for their ideas. Dora would rather they were between 45 and 54 and not very tall.

In the beginning the sisters concocted themselves. Those were the days before sackcloth and Quant, when it meant something to be chic, so they looked at the name they were born with, which was Davis, and somehow made Rahvis. Rahvis Couture.

They were first taken to Mayfair by their father when he returned to England after a venture in South Africa. He was a Jewish property speculator, rich one minute, poor the next. Their mother started the business during one of his crises—a very ordinary little dress place.

The sisters were smart. They thought of all sorts of little gimmicks before anybody else knew what a gimmick was—fantasy drapes in their little window, funny extravagant names for the clothes. Before long they had enough money to install themselves in a huge old house in Upper Grosvenor Street where they are to this day. Raemonde owns the business and Dora helps with the collections.

They have attracted a certain kind of woman to their salon, rich and worldly and craving glamour. Margaret Leighton is their favourite and her portrait in oils hangs in their showroom.

Their best years were the late forties and the fifties. They did things with the New Look that everybody needed at the time, kind of swirling and floating and very dressed-up. Some of their best clients were the wives and daughters of Press Lords. Aly Khan and Orson Welles used to go to their parties. Burglars kept stealing their jewels.

People who know them say the sisters haven't changed a bit since those days. It's just that they keep their jewels locked up in the bank—and London is a different place.

The sisters never meet at night except occasionally when they come across each other in the gambling clubs. Dora says she is an all-time loser. When she's down, and occasionally she is £200 down, she thinks "What a damn silly way to waste money and I get as black as hell."

Dora likes giving dinner parties, her table set for eight or ten, a fire burning in the grate—and the clocks put well forward. "I don't care who knows it. I love having people but they always stay too long."

"I'm mad about etymology. I love hearing brilliant conversation even if it's over my head"

She thinks writers make good guests if they're men and MPs if they're dishy. "They've got such command of words. I'm mad about etymology. I love words. I love hearing brilliant conversation even if it's over my head. Winston was her all-time favourite man. "It was his inspiration, his choice of words, oh and his cuddliness."

Raemonde likes restaurants, a different restaurant every night. Often she asks people back to her flat for drinks. The flat is above the showroom. Parts of it have just been done up in glamorous style by two young interior designers from Australia who are friends of hers. The entrance hall has been converted into a bar with white and green vinyl tiles on the floor, polished every day and looking like marble. A long white sofa is pushed against the far wall. Blue and green glass from Casa Pupa, but to be replaced by Venetian, is displayed on shelves. Old French prints mounted in green hang on the walls, the doors are white and brass-studded. She has a small collection of china and gilt hands.

The entire flat is wired for music: "Pale hands I loved beside the Shalimar", "The Dream of Olwen", "Stranger in Paradise" and others. The balustrade is upholstered in crushed pink velvet with brass studs. The main bedroom has pink silk-papered walls and a lot of white frills and heart-shaped cushions. The second bedroom is also pink and white with flowered paper and lacy lamps.

"I didn't like him. I didn't dislike him but I didn't like him"

The dining room has a large mirror-topped table with a scalloped edge and maroon linen doileys.

Dora lives nearby in Mayfair with her husband who she says is almost a millionaire. He retired a few years ago when he sold a small chain of stores.

"He's a very handsome little man," she says. They have been married 16 years. She says they have separate bedrooms, separate bathrooms. She always listens to his advice on business problems. He is her second husband.

Raemonde thinks everybody should be married once. "What do you know about it," queries Dora. "You were only married for 18 months. I've been married all my life. I have. Ever since I was 16. I ran away. It was just no good though. I didn't like him. I didn't dislike him but I didn't like him."

Dora says Raemonde's husband was very good-looking. "Well wasn't he?" Raemonde supposes he was. "But men are so weak. A woman wants to be mastered. When a man gets married all he wants to do is hibernate, sit at home every night. It's women who want to go out. I think the trouble with marriage is that you put all your eggs in one basket, so to speak. I don't think I like concentrating on just one person."

Dora says she's an all or nothing woman. "But being in love is evil. It's an obsession. If you just love someone and it's sort of platonic, that's good. It's the in-love bit, oh that's evil."

Raemonde thinks some good must come out of it. "All that feeling can't be wasted. But to tell you the truth I wouldn't give up my friends for any man. My friends are very precious to me. Real friends are people you can ring up in the middle of the night. When the man's gone your friends are still there."

Dora says you can soon make friends. Any time. She thinks a good friend is someone who will lie for you if necessary.

There was a time, four years ago, when Raemonde was thinking of marrying Paul Adam, the bandleader. They announced their engagement and he told the Press he wanted some permanence in his life and that Raemonde was really the right girl. Six months later, they concluded in the William Hickey column that he worked by night, she worked by day and they'd never meet.

"He's a nice man really," says Raemonde now. "But tell me, honestly, would you marry someone who was being chased by young girls all the time? His fans used to ring him up all the time. You'd never know where you were."

"When you're married you just have to get used to your husband having little affairs. Everybody knows that. But all those young girls running after him, that's something else altogether."

Adam was 47 at the time. Raemonde says "I don't like younger men for myself, personally. But I like their company. They've got more sparkle, a fresh sort of attitude. It must be my frustrated maternal instinct coming out. No, that's wrong. I like to think of myself as a sort of big sister to them all. A bit older in years, perhaps, but not in spirit."

"I can't stand young men. I can't bear them. I like them to be young for their age but mature"

Dora shudders. "I can't stand young men. I can't bear them. I like them to be young for their age but mature."

She likes Time and Playboy and never looks at fashion magazines. "I can't bear them. My sister reads the lot. All I want to know about fashion is what Balenciaga's doing because he's the Daddy of them all."

"To tell you the truth this whole business drives me mad. I'm a perfectionist, you see. And every time we start on another collection I go round the bend trying to get everything perfect. Sometimes everything gets together quite easily. This time we've had hardly any hitches. But there are times when I say that's no good, that's no good and that's a mess. Do it all again. So we start from scratch. And then I think perhaps we're getting somewhere. But when it's over after the collection's been shown I start seeing faults everywhere. Too late then of course. So I think wait until next time, we'll have the most perfect and simple collection the world's ever seen."

The sisters are renowned for the flamboyancy of the clothes they design. A fashion writer once said, "Whenever I see someone draped in chiffon, I think 'Oh God, another Rahvis'."

But their clients have included Lady Mountbatten, Zsa-Zsa Gabor, Marilyn Monroe, Jane Russell, the Queen of Albania and "some queens who got chucked". They have made a golf hat for Danny Kaye and a shirt for Jerry Lewis.

The sisters say their hallmark is glamour. Both hotly maintain they have a passion for simplicity. Raemonde prefers to wear tailored suits in good tweeds and suedes. Dora says her favourite dresses are black slips with straps. That is, when she has any dresses.

"There's a woman who's dying to get her hands on this suit. Well she can't have it"

"There are certain times of the year when I've no clothes and I think this is one of them. I get something from the workroom and then I sell it. There's a woman who's dying to get her hands on this suit. Well she can't have it. For goodness sake don't give it to her when my back's turned. It's all I've got."

Raemonde says: "We have a few dear friends who can't afford Rahvis clothes so we let them have our things when we've worn them a bit.

"We've never had any difficulty in getting clients, not even in the beginning. I think it's partly because we put our personalities into our clothes. The clothes are really what we are, if you see what I mean."

When a collection is due work dominates their lives. In the between times both are subject to pet obsessions. Dora's current one as it happens is so strong that not even the collection could subdue it. She has bought a small house in Curzon Street and every morning she goes down there chivvying the builders, the decorators, the odd job men. "It'll be wonderful when it's finished. I've got this marvellous fireplace with flying horses on it. I'm doing the whole house up completely. I won't have an interior decorator. I don't like them, even though it knocks hell out of me doing it myself. It's not as if I know what I'm going to do with it when it is finished. I just thought I'd buy it and do it up."

Raemonde is currently being spellbound by the 18th century. She fell in love with the period's architecture first. "But that period has such tentacles of beauty and elegance, you can't just stop at architecture. I would have loved being alive then. Don't you think today is rather inelegant?"

Dora used to rent a flat in Brighton. She thought it was nice to go there for weekends but now she would much rather be in the Bahamas. She swims a lot. "I love the feeling of being wet. I must have been a duck. I could swim the Channel. I'm sure I could. I could swim for ever. I'm mad about keeping the body perfect. I go to the International Sportsman's Club. It's quite handy really."

Both do charity work, Dora for arthritics, Raemonde for cancer. Dora says "I won't sit on those committees with all those women in those hats. I used to visit an arthritic every week and then she died. Do you know what happens to you when you're dead? I'm going to be up there in my long grey chiffon with a good pair of binoculars saying 'Fancy meeting you here' to all my old chums.

"What do you mean which side? What else is there worth being than a Conservative?"

"We had a client who was an actress. She'd got cancer. She liked me and she kept asking for me so I used to go and see her. They told her she'd had it. I felt sorry for her. One afternoon she said she thought she'd had it the night before. She said she nearly went. She said there was nothing to worry about, it was all daffodils. I said well in that case let me come with you. I didn't know what else to say."

The other day Raemonde agreed to take a team of models to the North of England to give a charity showing of their collection. She is also interested in a new young artist, Gronow Davies. She helped him launch his first exhibition in the Grosvenor Gallery which is below their show-room and used to be part of their premises. She is a director of the gallery.

Raemonde would rather talk about the present than the past. She says she feels a hundred when she comes across any of the films that she and Dora worked on. They designed the clothes for the play Born Yesterday and a variety of films - Blithe Spirit, Room at the Top. Now they are working on Sophia Loren's clothes for A Severed Head.

Dora is interested in politics. "What do you mean which side? What else is there worth being than a Conservative? What else could I be? I'm mad about electioneering. I'm ruthless at it. I clawed people out of their beds the last time when I went round knocking on doors. I'd never actually met the man who was standing once, but I told them all he was the best man in the world and if they didn't vote for him they were doomed. Doomed."

Both say they are hopeless at anything practical. Including sewing. Dora puts it succinctly: "We can't sew a button on between us. No. What we're good at me and my sister is telling people how to do things. We just have the knack of teaching people. It doesn't matter what it is. If ever you come across someone who's been a cook for us, you want to grab them quick. I can't cook of course except for omelettes. And quite often the cooks can't cook when they first come. We just tell them what we want and somehow they understand." Raemonde says she met Alexander Plunkett-Green at a party once and he told her he used to stand outside their door recruiting their staff.

The sisters admire Mary Quant enormously. They think she is probably the most outstanding of the young designers. "She's the only one with real originality," says Dora. "I've no time for all these young things who just get blown up into geniuses overnight and then you hear no more about them.

"When they make the history of fashion I bet you'll find that only three things will stand out in this last twenty years, the New Look, the sack and op art. Ugghh, op art. It's a bit like the Plantagenets, isn't it? It's the War of the Roses again, the way people look at op art. They're either on one side or the other."

And we all know which side the Rahvis sisters are on.

Rebel!

Rebel against the trite, the ordinary, the customary.

Don't take anybody's word for "the way it's always been done". Strike out for yourself. Explore!

And if anyone ever invents a better sanitary protection than Tampax, we'll want you to try it.

No one has in more than twenty-five years. Tampax gives you the peace of mind you want on problem days. Nothing can show, no one can know. Odour vanishes. Tampax is so comfortable, you're not even aware you're using it. From the ease of insertion (using the silken-smooth applicator) to the ease of disposal, Tampax internal sanitary protection is ideal.

Your choice of 2 absorbencies (Regular and Super) in standard 10's, and the new Economy 40's at substantial saving. Tampax Limited, Havant, Hants.

Will whisky-wise Englishmen persist in hoarding their Crawford's even when it's Christmas?

Perish the thought! It was another matter when you had to smuggle this great Scotch out of Scotland. But no longer. Now only a Scrooge of an Englishman would deny his friends a bottle or at least a wee dram of Crawford's at Christmas-time. It is one of the good things of life. Last year over a million bottles of Crawford's were consumed in Scotland alone. This Christmas whisky-wise Englishmen will be closing the gap with a flourish. A flourish of Crawford's 'Three Star' or, better still, a fanfare of Crawford's superlative 'Five Star'—so right for special occasions.

RECOMMENDED RETAIL PRICES: "Three Star" Imp. quarts (1½ bottles) 72/- bottles 48/6, ½ bottles 25/3, ¼ bottles 12/11, Miniatures 4 10. "Five Star" bottles 52/6, ½ bottles 27/3, Miniatures 5/7

BP VISITS THE PANTO MIME

Up goes the safety curtain. Down go the lights. Louder grow the cheers. A strident fanfare from the orchestra and the year's biggest mix-up, knock-about spectacle zips into life. Soon from gods to boxes they're one. Chanting and chattering. Hearts glowing, hands clapping. Booming at the bad man. Cooing at the good. Loving every single joke—local, topical or edged with the dame's traditional blue. Even to a grown-up, some of the magic of pantomime remains. Through a child's eyes, it's still a dream.

BP Festivals Series No. 18 Traditional pantomime is dying, sadly. Happily in Leeds it's still alive. And very much so. Last year in the plush and gilt Grand, a great pantomime theatre, 'Goldilocks' played to packed and delighted houses. This year it's 'Robinson Crusoe'. Curtain-up December 24th. And rising twice daily at 2 p.m. and 7.

'I went to the pantomime, and I painted this picture of Goldilocks,' by Sarah Quayle, aged 8½.
